Business Brief

Anheuser-Busch announces major upgrade to Brewery

Anheuser-Busch, Inc., has announced it will invest $200 million over the next three years to modernize its Williamsburg brewery.

At a news conference in May, Brewery Manager Brian McNelis announced the upgrade would create more floor space at the plant by replacing five existing bottling lines with three new high-speed lines, leaving space for adding future lines if needed.

Another change will be consolidation of the Brewery's two present control centers into a single room, allowing each step in the Brewery's process to be monitored from a single location. The status of every operation - from processing of raw materials to packing and shipping - can be tracked on the monitors.

Because some existing equipment will be replaced, the net tax benefit to the County has not yet been determined; however, County officials note that such a significant investment bodes well for the future of the plant. At $4.8 million a year in property taxes, the Brewery is already the County's largest taxpayer, accounting for roughly 7 percent of total County property tax revenue. Five other breweries in the Anheuser-Busch system are undergoing upgrades at the same time, reflecting the strength of the company's domestic market share, which hit 52.1 percent in the first quarter of this year.

Anheuser-Busch estimated the project would take about three years to complete and could result in as many as 750 construction jobs over that period. About 80 existing jobs at the Brewery are expected to be phased out through employee retirement over the same period.

The Brewery shipped 9.5 million barrels of beer in 2002, ranking third in level of production among the Anheuser-Busch breweries.
