Emergency card close as wallet

The Virginia Department of Health (VDH) is distributing a wallet card to help people prepare for public health emergencies.

The cards contain useful emergency preparedness tips and a fill-in-the-blank area to record personal health information necessary for receiving medical services during an emergency. VDH will distribute 1.1 million wallet cards throughout the state. The cards are also available at the Health Department, 1126 Professional Drive, and Wal-Mart.

The cards include tips for creating a family emergency health plan, information about mass immunizations/medications and what people should do if directed to a dispensing site, a chart of a few diseases and exposures potentially associated with terrorism, including general symptoms and treatment information, and contact information for additional resources.
